Field of the Invention The present invention relates to a method for processing decoded data from a digital camera, and in particular to a digital camera having means for automatically judging a processing order of data based on the processing status, a method for processing decoded data, and an image processing apparatus. 2. Description of the Related Art To process decoded data obtained from an image obtained with a digital camera or the like, first, the image is recorded by a digital camera or the like. Next, for example, the captured image is converted into a predetermined format (e.g., RAW (raw image) format) by a RAW converter. Next, the decoded data is generated by a RAW converter. In an image-capturing apparatus in which a captured image is converted into a predetermined format, it is usually impossible to process decoded data unless a predetermined format (e.g., RAW (RAW) format) is set beforehand in advance. Therefore, in most cases, it is impossible to process decoded data until the captured image is recorded in a predetermined format by the image-capturing apparatus. However, to process decoded data with a RAW converter, it is preferable that decoded data is generated as soon as possible. Therefore, it is desirable to process the decoded data without waiting until the image is captured in a predetermined format. e79caf774b
